

An unusual aerial photograph of Vesuvius in eruption. For the first time since 1906 the great volcano is very active and a few weeks ago caused considerable alarm in Naples. A new cone, 230 feet high, has developed, and stones and lava have been thrown up in considerable quantities.

Copyright photograph by the Italian Establishment of Aeronautic Construction, supplied by Prof. Federico Halbherr. Courtesy Illustrated London News.

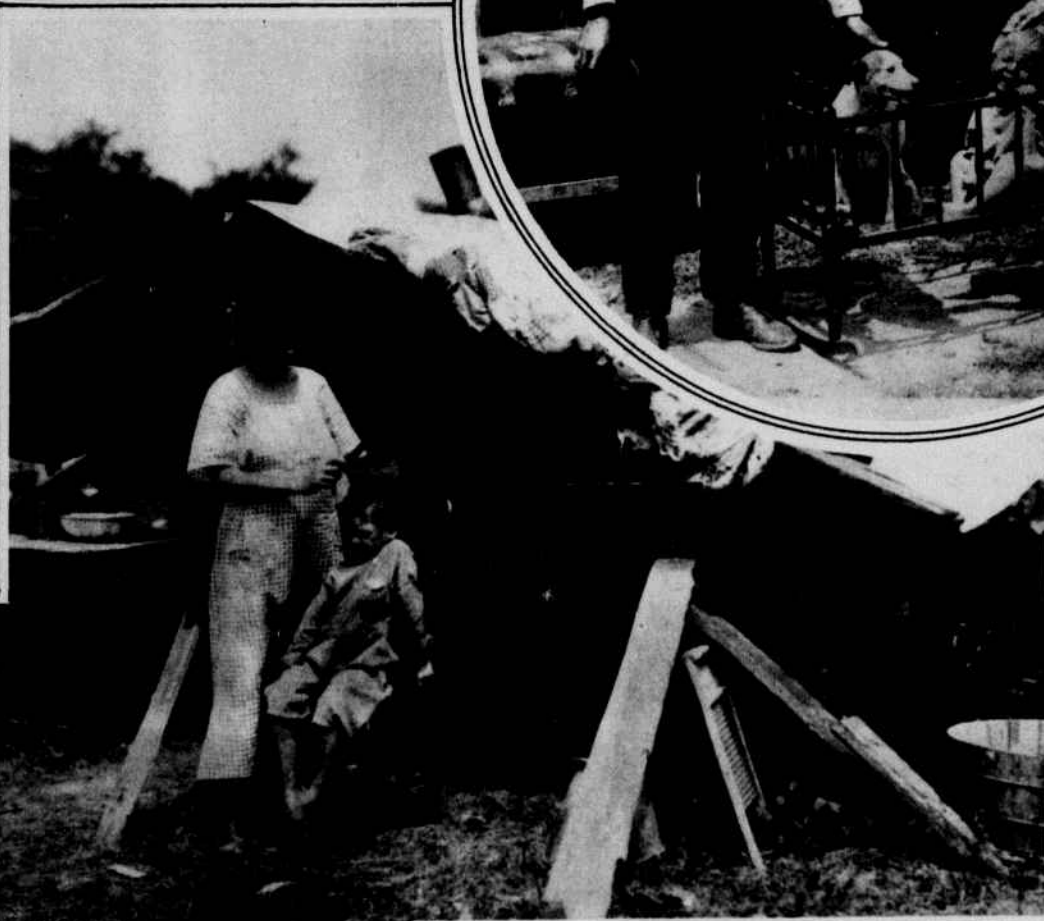

Striking soft coal miners in the Republic and Brownsville districts of Pennsylvania, evicted from their homes, owned by the mine operators, carrying their possessions to new quarters.

Pacific & Atlantic.

Above—A homeless miner with his wife and child in front of a newly improvised refuge.

Pacific & Atlantic.

At left—House-keeping in the open—an evicted miner's wife keeping up her duties in her new home, a hastily constructed shelter.

Pacific & Atlantic.

Florida Batson and Camille Sabie, who will represent America in the women's international games at Pershing Stadium, near Paris, this month, practicing at the hurdles.

International.

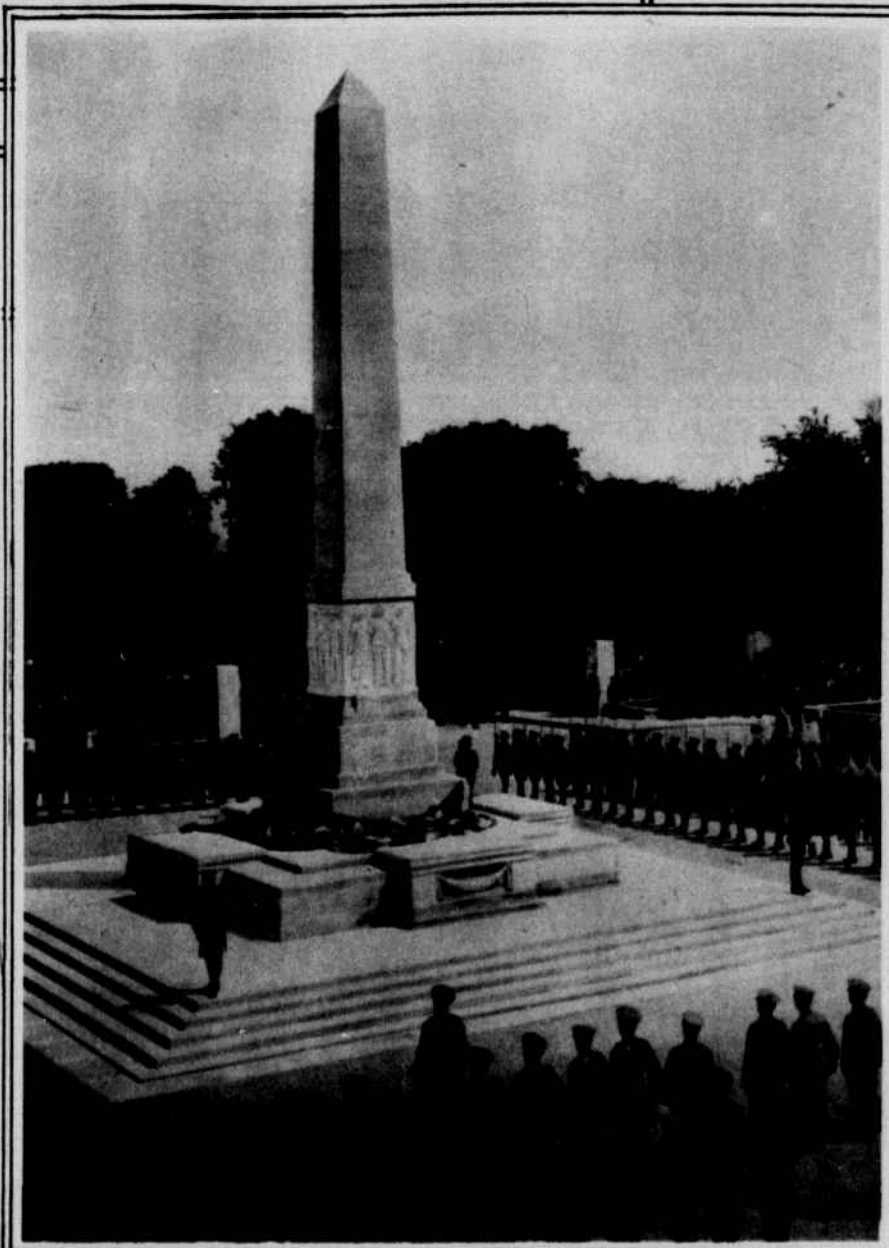

Above—A celebration at Milan, Italy, in honor of the troops who participated in the Italian seizure of Trieste. Standards made by the women of the city and blessed by a popular army chaplain were given to the veterans.

Gilliams.

At Right—Lord Louis Mountbatten and his bride, the former Edwina Ashley, on their honeymoon at the Ashley estate, Broadlands, Hampshire.

New York Herald Foreign Photo.

A memorial to Lord Kitchener and the fallen members of the Royal Engineers unveiled by the Duke of Connaught at Chatham, England.

Keyes of the English Navy, inspecting the guard of the comradeship between British and French channel